SALVINO MILETO by Foto Alba

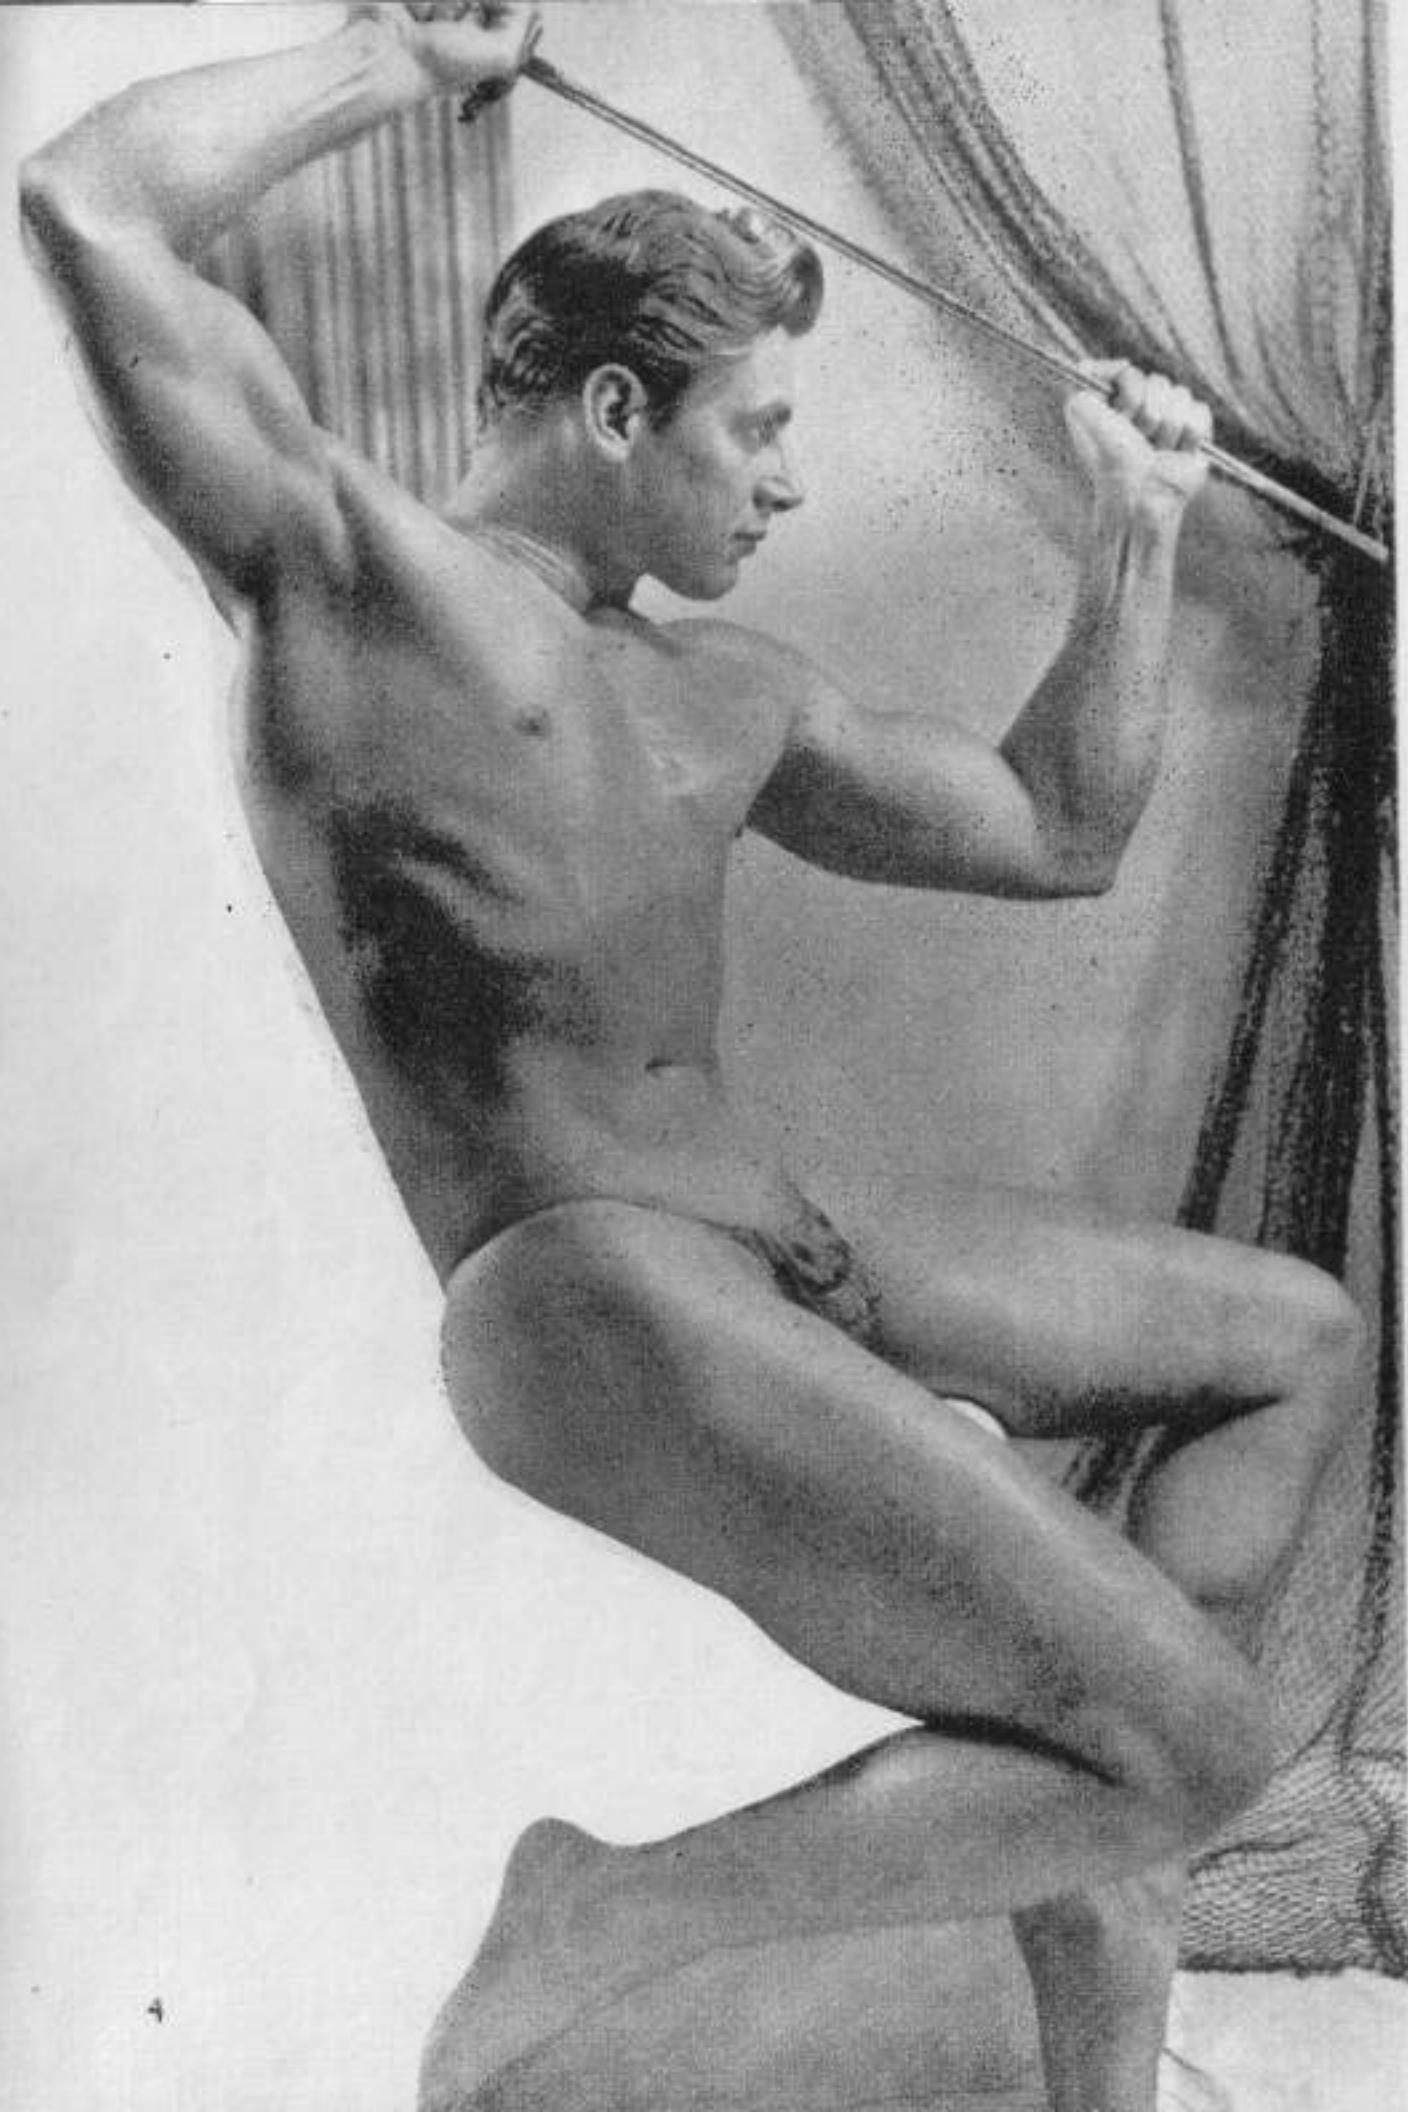

EACH new addition to the scope of Man's endeavour, be it Gold or Oil or Real Estate, seems to be attended by a tremendous upsurge of interest, which is aptly summed up in the word Rush. In the early stages everyone rushes to get in on the band-waggon. Physique Movies seem to have arrived at this stage . . . which is perhaps the same as saying "they have arrived"; many of the Studios are now producing them and standards are being evolved. It will most likely find its level as a more specialised form of entertainment than the normal movie, and it's clear it starts off with at least one handicap: the stars can't get by on just a pretty face. The Zenith movie, The Captives, from which our cover is a still, is a story of ancient Rome and what happens to friends that are captured. As you can see, the actors are not only handsome but have physiques worthy of this new form of display. We will continue to follow this development of Physical Culture and spotlight its progress frequently through these pages; for more information turn up the advert on page 58.

PIENAAR

Hendryk Pienaar

Born 18 years ago on a farm in the Orange Free State, Hendryk is one of many boys who have come to Johannesburg to seek better working conditions and pay. He is now employed with South African Railways, and lives with hundreds of other youths in a noisy but well-run hostel. Is surprisingly short considering his appearance in some of enclosed pics., but very bright, with a cheerful, friendly disposition. Goes home regularly to his parents's farm, where he likes to swim, fish and shoot. Eventually wants to farm on his own. The groundwork of a good physique was laid by all this activity, now augmented by a regular serious training at Hannes Venter's large Johannesburg gym. Jock predicts a future champion in Hendryk Pienaar.

JOCK

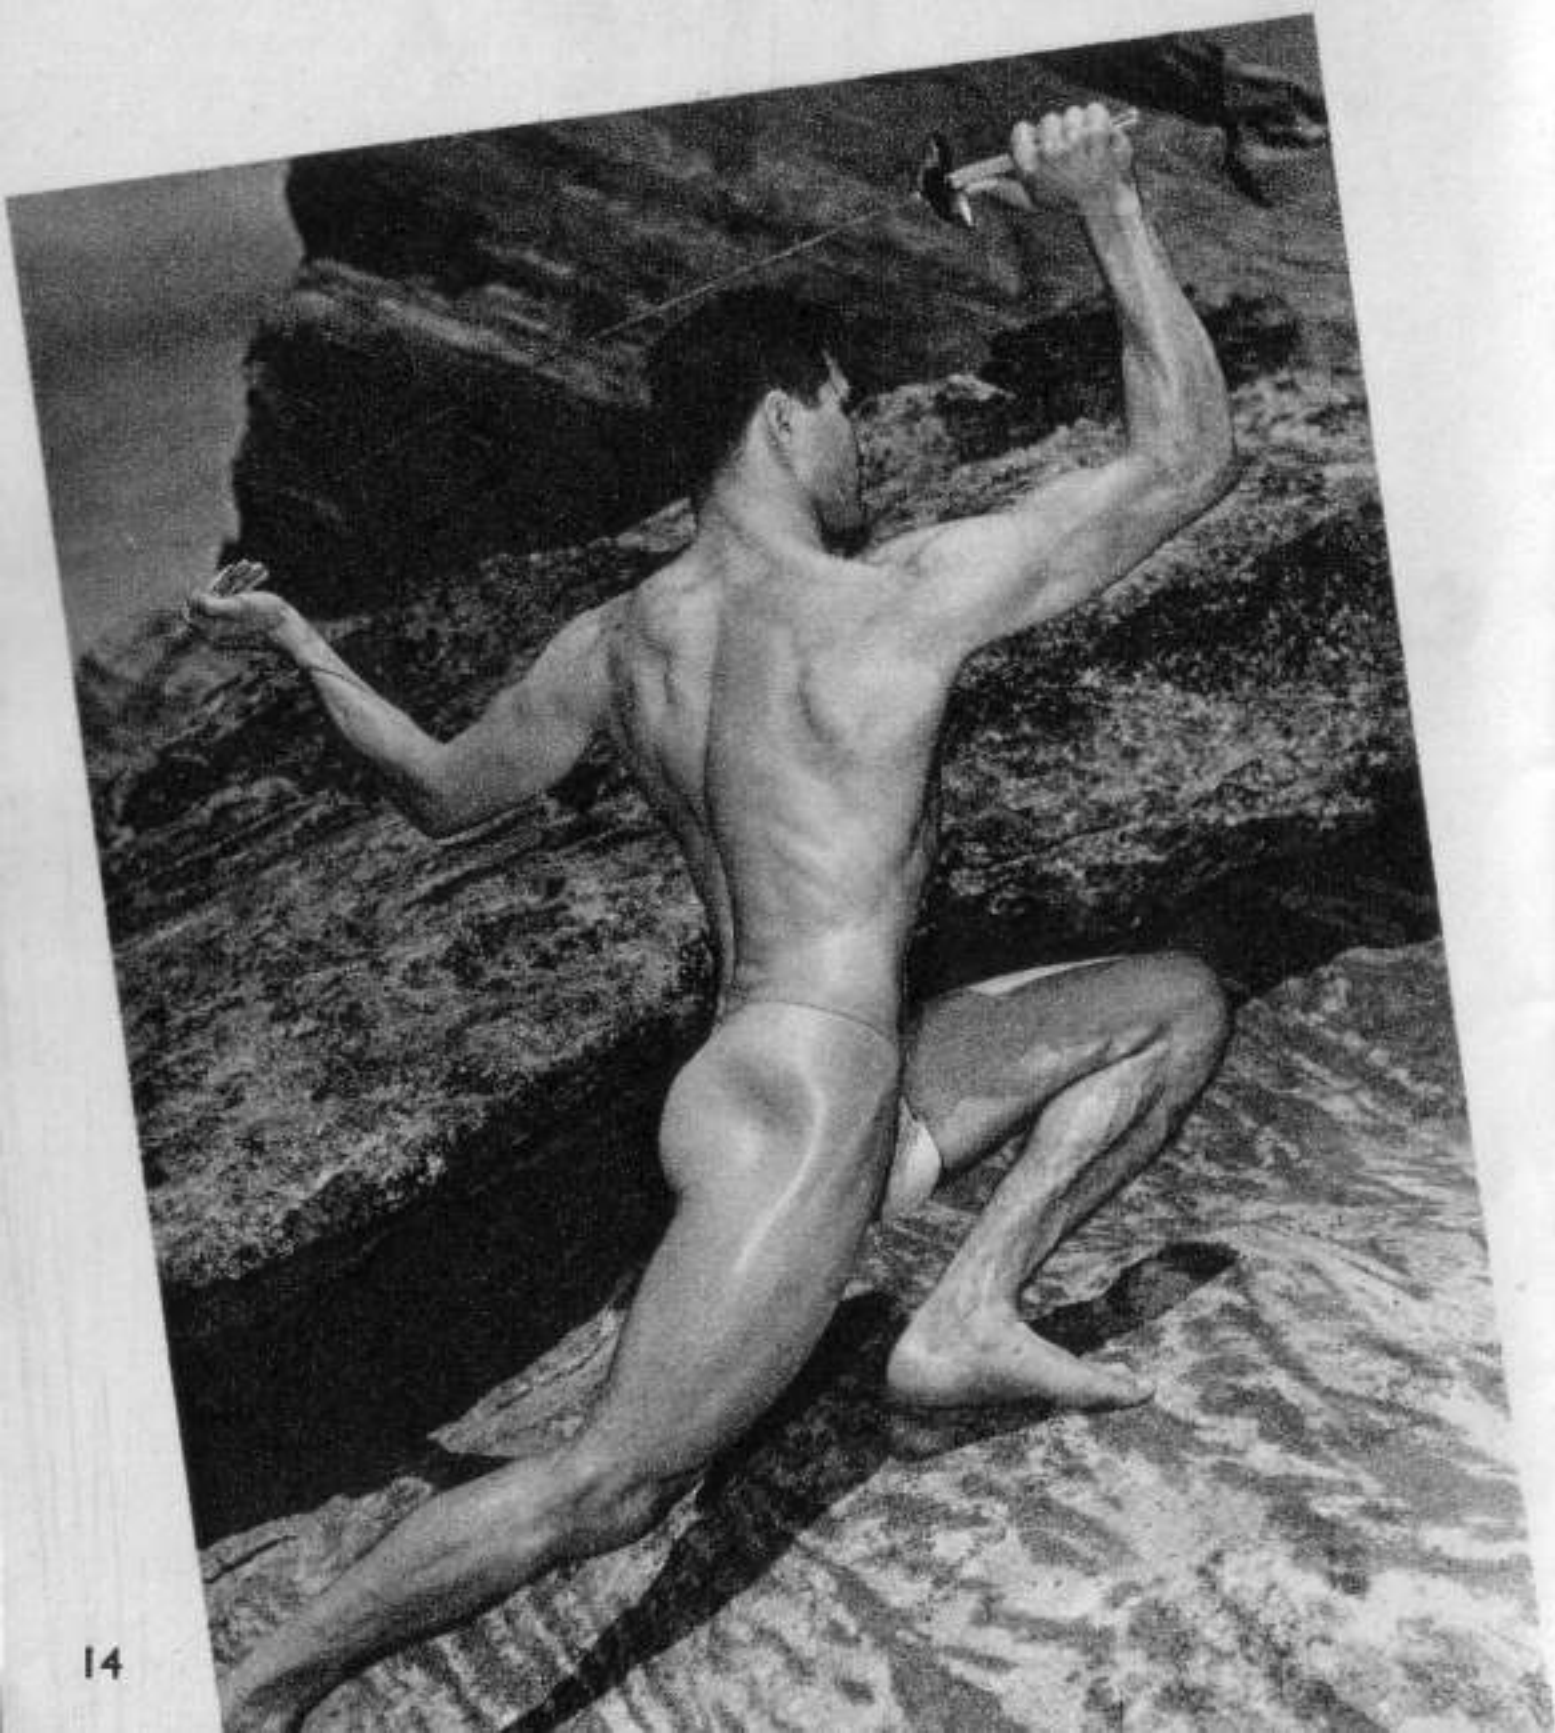

Pieter Botha

Photographed overlooking Johannesburg suburb of Melville on a cloudy Sunday afternoon, after session at local swimming pool, where Jock noted his handsome physical appearance. First time before the camera, but has been training at Municipal Sports Club for the last 6 months and is keen to continue to competition standards. Likes Elvis and Crosby depending on his mood and is a competent guitar and drums player.

Willem Jacobs

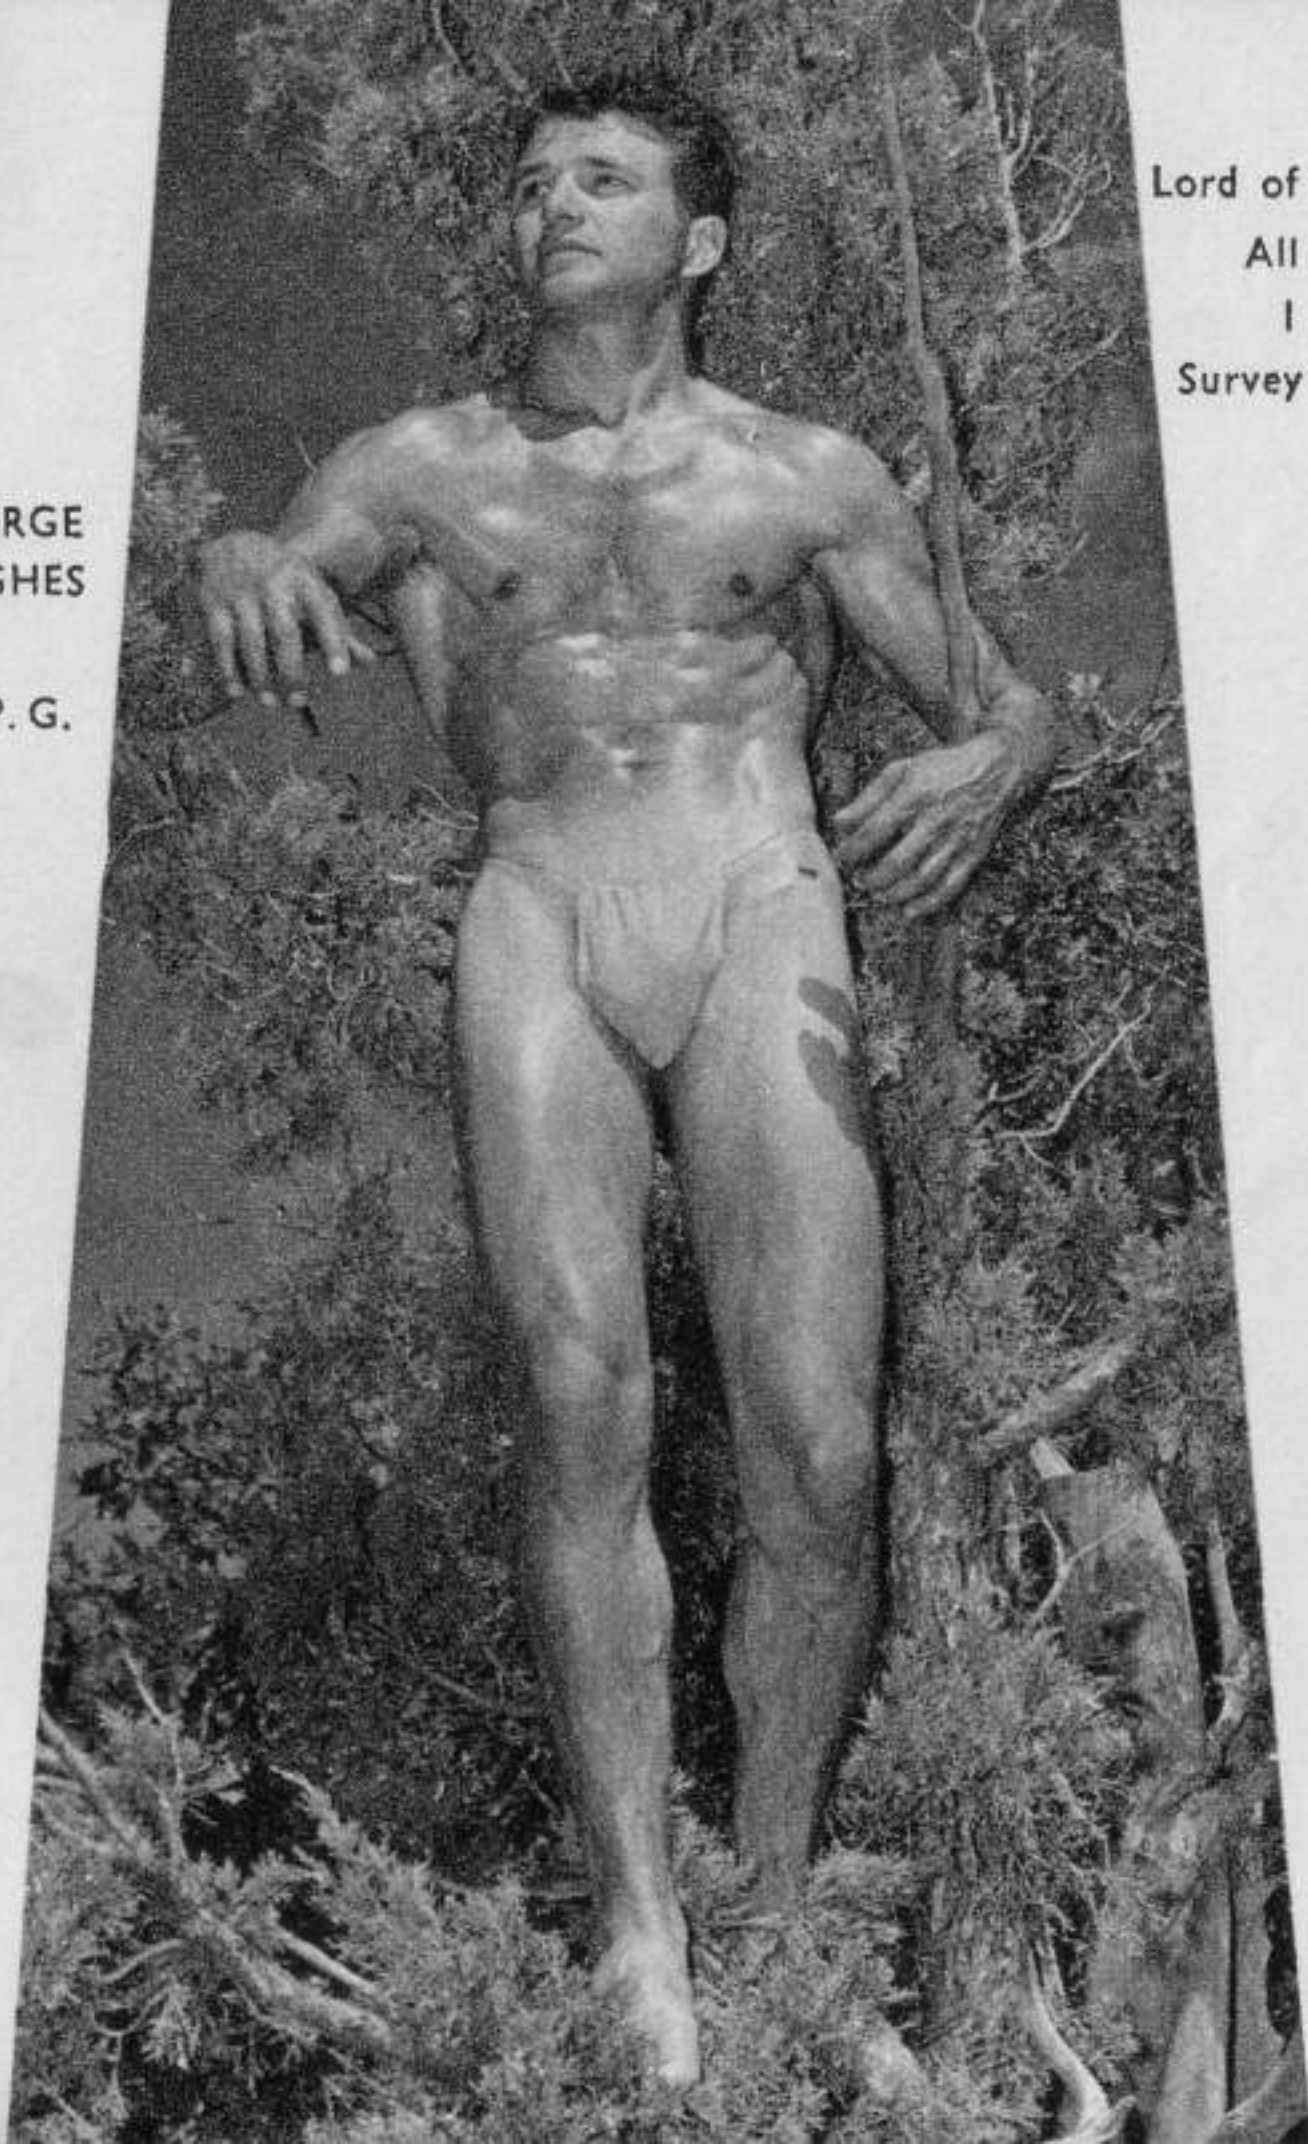

Sixteen years old, promising member of one of Johannesburg's best equipped progressive gymnasiums: Mr. Universe Health Studios operated by Jannie Graaff, Mr. Universe 1954, who is an inspiration to some of this town's finest teenager physiques.

EARL MAYNARD

We included these great action shots by Royale immediately following Western Photography Guild's offering, because for long WPG have been renowned as one of the very greatest Studios for Action Physique Photography. We do not suggest that Royale will topple them from their throne . . . indeed we feel that their work could possibly be equalled but never surpassed, but it is good to see with what virile mastery Royale has composed these truly Active Duos.

J-ROME stops in Paris

Paris is a city which has long been known for its endless beauty in the art of expression and although many of her art objects are foreign she displays them with pride. For instance, the two muscular figures illustrated below might suggest man's continual insistance to misunderstand his fellow man and while on the opposite page there appears one of the more tranquil scenes of manhood. These two scenes appear at the opposite ends of life, illustrating he who is looking and he who has looked. Both these unique pieces of sculpture stand in the Jardin des Tuileries facing the famous Louvre Museum in Paris. J-Rome offers a true drama in muscle in its series "Men of France," the details of which may be found on page 62.

Because some events are more recent than our history books, we are making this explanation for our title to this section of superb Joek photos. The Title so ideally suited the aloof and commanding poses which young Klaus Dieter fits so well that we risked using the phrase which twenty years ago summed up the political aspirations of the German Race. For after all History has now soothed the passions that were then excited, and before we try to revive old susceptibilities we could perhaps recall that a couple of hundred years ago the fair name of France and her American Colonies was equally hated in North America and England herself was despised and feared from the Atlantic to the Pacific. These old enmities have now subsided into History and young Dieter must not be saddled with the memory of more recent ones.

He was born in Hamburg, Germany, and has been living in South Africa for around four years. Intelligent and sensitive, he would like to start bodybuilding but a shift-job with Municipal Transport Dept. doesn't permit. One day he hopes to realise his ambition to become an aircraft instrument mechanic, then he'll take it up in earnest. On arrival in this country, he worked for three years on a large farm as assistant overseer but migrated to the big city to learn a trade. He plays tennis, swims and fishes; is classically-minded: opera and Viennese music being his preferences. He thinks posing is fun and is interested in the results enough to want to improve his physique. Good luck, Klaus!
